You Grew In My Heart

You grew in my heart like a warm embrace,
as if in a dream of a spring in Rome.

I wish I had known how high you could climb
this broken old foul soul of mine.

I don't dare to ask for a kiss or two,
yet I wouldn't mind for a moonlit smile.

If only you knew how much I love you,
this old fool would burst into tears.

The stars only light up so much of the sky,
yet you light me up like a christmas tree.
The sun only warms up so much of the earth
yet you shine on east, west, north and south.

Alone in my room in my solitude,
I think of your love just for me
and wish that it'd bloom like a blossoming tree
just as you grew right in my heart.
